

Moors Gorse Pumping Station, Hednesford Road

The original building at Moors Gorse, completed in 1878, was swept away in the 1970's when the James Watt steam engines were replaced by electrically driven pumps. The two photographs were taken from similar angles as evidenced by the location of the Company House which is clearly visible on the right hand photograph. The window frames of the same house can just be seen underneath the tree on the extreme left hand side of the 2010 view.